The Virginia Gazette, of Williamsburg has been revived and comes to our office in modern dress. It is edited by our townsman Prof. Hivilah Babcock, and we are glad to welcome him to the 4th estate from which no traveler ever returns.

That Farmville Meeting

The Virginia Press Association held its mid-winter session at Farmville Friday and Saturday. The members got down to business early and adopted the very important report of its legislative committee, heard several fine addresses among them one delivered by Capt. Robt. M. Hughes, of Norfolk, on the "Old Time Fighting Editor." The association directed Mosely, Land, Wall, and Clement to place a wreath at the tomb of J. L. Hart, deceased. It was a great meeting in many respects and Va. editors know now more about Farmville than ever before. Farmville is a great convention city with her fine new, hotel under manager Woolling, her great Teachers College for women with Dr. Jarman at its head and 900 pretty girls, the liviliest Lion Club we have ever met, the association was on the go all the time; the character of entertainments were of the highest order—the best of good-will speeches, music and eats. Lion Barry Wall, of the Herald had charge of the elaborate program and he insisted that it be carried out. The association is especially indebted to Dr. Jarman, and his girls who furnished both instrumental and vocal music. Dr. Jarman conducted the entire association through the plant of the college, and many of the editors were amazed at the magnitude of the plant—valued at $1,000,000. Great is the hospitality of Farmville, her citizens and her institutions.

What About It?

G. Wat on James, Jr., historian for the General Society of the Sons of the Revolution, admitted today that Rupert Hughes was right when he stated recently that George Washington was "a gamester, a champion cusser, and a distiller of whisky." But, Mr. James said, he saw no reason for bringing out as sensational "a few natural inclinations of a great man, all of which were acknowledge by that man and by a few of his biographers.

"Of course, Washington drank," Mr. James asserted. "All Virginia gentlemen did: likewise he made his own liquor, as all Virginians did. He would not have been a man if he did not enjoy a dance with a pretty woman and did not dance with her as long ad he could. "All Virginia was full of pretty women, and what chance had even the Father of His Country against them? As for swearing and horse racing and card playing, they were as comon as taxes are today."

Dad always told us Gen. Washington was a proper ideal and we believe what Dad said about the General. And we believe the girls just as attractive today as they were in the General's day.

Plumbing Ocean's Depths

The deepest depth at which even the most experienced diver can work is now about 200 feet. Scientists are constantly experimenting on diving suits and equipment which will make possible operations at a greater depth. There is untold treasure in lost shipping and it is hoped that improved apparatus will enable divers to salvage at depths never before attempted.

Charges vs Co ops

Anything having to do with the Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association is of much interest to the growers of the weed in this county. About 75 per cent of the growers of this county are members of the association and no county in the state produces a finer type of dark tobacco than Appomattox. Our farmers are keenly interested in the tobacco business.

The Trade Commission of the Federal Government having under consideration the question of discrimination by certain large dealers against the Co-ops report in its finding there has been no unlawful discrimination against the Co-ops.

The Commission further reported some ugly charges against officers of the association, which Mr. Sands declares are unfair to the association and he promises to answer every charge made by the commission against the association. It is to be hoped that the officers will be able to show that no wrong doing has been practiced and that the directors of the association have properly guarded the interest of its members.

For three years the association has maintained a fair price for tobacco which has been a help to all classes of business and not eventhose growers outside of the association want to see it go out of business.

With the National and State Governments lending every possible aid, local and national financial institutions helping, business and political friends encouraging in every possible way, it would seem certain that the farmers would rally under the banner of co-operative marketing and save the organization from the rocks.

In summing the facts disclosed by the investigation, the Federal Trade Commission states: "There was no move on the part of the re-driers generally to advance re-drying charges in 1922.

"The directors did not pass on or give their approval to the matter of official engaging in the business or re-drying association tobacco in 1923 to meet the alleged emergency. Prior to 1925, it appears that the subject was discussed only in meetings of the executive committee.

"In most cases these association officials, including Messrs. Patterson, general manager and Watkins, director of warehouses secured their interests in re-drying plants or made their arrangements to re-dry association tobacco prior to the delivery of the first crop—the 1922 crop—and had re-dried tobacco of the 1922 crop, in exactly the same way in which they are alleged to have begun re-drying the 1923 deliveries. The directors of the association, with the possibility of a few exceptions, did not know until very recently that Messrs. Patterson and Watkins were engaged in re-drying association tobacco during 1922."

"The records show," the report continues, "that most of the plants to which comparatively small quantities of tobacco have been consigned and redried at $1.75 per 1000 pounds, realized profits, and where the volume handled was large profits were sufficient actually to enable Messrs Patterson and Watkins to acquire that year their two-thirds interest in this redrying company without any investment of capital. The second year, 1923, this concern redried 23,956,247 pounds of this co-operative's tobacco and out of the profits made thereon paid Messrs. Patterson and Watkins $82,000 in cash, in addition to which each retained a one-third equity in the capital not with-drawn which, at the end of the two years, amounted $88,955.45, all accumulated through profits."

After giving the financial statement of LaFrentz & Co., auditors, from which these totals were drawn, the commission continues: "The commission did not secure the financial condition of this concern for the crop year 1924, when it redried 18,000,000 pounds for redrying its 1922 and 1923 crops. The average cost to the Edmondson Tobacco Company for the two years was $1.05. Association officials have stated that the association was financially unable to provide redrying facilities in 1923. Had the association operated its own plants, it could have saved on the basis of the Edmondson costs, about a million and a half dollars on the total of 218,986,912 pounds of tobacco sent to private redriers in the three years. In such an arrangement the members and not officials would have been the beneficiaries in resulting profits or savings. Moreover, the displacement of the private interests of officials in these plants would have removed and incentive to offer tobacco for sale in redried order instead of in the green state. The association in 1925 has leased seven plants for redrying its own tobacco on a cost basis."

VERA

Despite the fact that the snow was scraped from the roads, the heavy rain has "fixed" them, the rain along with warm weather has melted the snow that covered the ground to a dept of 4 inches—consequently the creeks are raging; mail carriers having to make detours were delayed, this making mail delivery late.

Radio fans will be interested to know that American and Canadian broadcasters will begin at ten o'clock on the night of January 24th and transmit for one hour. Promptly at elaven o'clock North American broadcasters will shut down and remain silent for the next hour in order to permit listeners in on this side of the Atlantic to "fish" for European stations without local interference—this is the third annual international broadcast test and is looked forward to by "distant hunting" fans. Each night between Jan. 24th and 31st, this procedure will be followed—If you should be so fortunate as to "tune in" on a foreign station you are asked by the "Country Gentleman" to jot down what you hear and send to the Radio Editor of the "Country Gentleman," Philadelphia, Penn., to be verified by him.

Winter is half gone; it has been some winter too; we trust that the last half will not be quite so drastic—our wood pile is getting low.

Herman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Robertson of this neighborhood, had a narrow escape from death, if report is true. He was on the west bound N. & W. train which passes through Appomattox in the night and as we understand it, had fallen asleep, when he awoke he found the train had stopped at Appomattox and was starting on its westward journey. He realized he was about to be carried past his destination so grabbed his overcoat, ran to the door and jumped—he was found somewhile after in an unconsious condition and almost frozen; he is still at Appomattox, unable to be removed to his home. We hope his injuries will not prove fatal.

Mrs. Charles Grow, who spent the holidays here with relatives, and nursed her sick daughter, Miss Florence, has returned to her duties as nurse, at Roanoke.

Mr. Kirk Megginson was very much indisposed last week; we are glad to report he is better at this writing.
